

May 7, 2009

Dear PowerCore Team,

Early last December, one of our members did a seven-minute presentation on nutrition and how certain things we do without thinking can negatively impact our health. That presentation was an epiphany for me, as I had been dealing with some of what he talked about for over two years. Going the standard medical route, I had invasive test after invasive test, and it seemed like the only thing the specialists cared about was their piece of me, not the problem I had gone to them for.

Dr. Branden Evans was relatively new to our team last December, so I listened carefully to his one-minutes for the next few weeks, and decided that he was consistent, believable and someone I could trust. We made an appointment, and I was blown away. He asked questions for a solid hour, trying to understand what was going on and how best to address the issue. He took a few days to formulate a plan, ordered a non-invasive test to confirm his suspicions, and made his recommendations, which were hardly anything in comparison to the issues I'd been dealing with for over two years.

In about two months, Dr. Branden Evans' plan worked, clearing up the problems and making me feel better than I had in years. His caring and gentle manner makes going to his office a treat, and he is someone I would highly recommend, whether for an acute problem or just wellness care and adjustments. In every profession, there are a handful of stand-outs. In the chiropractic profession, Dr. Branden Evans is clearly one of the stand-outs, and we are fortunate to have him on our team.

Sincerely,

Sandy Weaver Carman
CEO, Voicework on Demand, Inc.
770-310-6932
sandy@voiceworkondemand.com